

Emily Deas

Across, like, all of my different savings accounts and everything I have about $60,000 dollars.

And my goal is to have $100,000 by the time I'm 26.

And when you have this goal of savings is a part of my income.

Then it's a lot easier than when you're going, "well, what's left over?"

That was one of the things that really inspired me to save so much, when I was making 13 dollars an hour.

13 dollars an hour usually worked out to about 1700 a month.

I was always able to put at least 500 dollars a month into savings.

So, when I got my new job, I just didn't change any of my spending habits at all.

And so at this point, I get to put somewhere between 1500 or 2,000 a month into savings.

It wasn't something that I really figured out until this weekend.

That you can compare rates and get different benefits and have different fees.

And that you can put in less money at an earlier age and end up with a greater amount.

Than someone who puts in significantly more money 10 or 15 years down the line.

That's a really important thing for especially like early 20 year olds...

Go ahead and start it, even if you don't have much to contribute.

The material provided on this video is for informational use only and is not intended for financial or investment advice. Bank of America and/or its affiliates assume no liability for any loss or damages resulting from one's reliance on the material provided. Please also note that such material is not updated regularly and that some of the information may not therefore be current. Consult with your own financial professional when making decisions regarding your financial or investment management.

Better Money Habits, Bank of America and the Bank of America logo are registered trademarks of Bank of America Corporation.

©2019 Bank of America Corporation.

AR3NSFYM